Class meets:

BLOCK G+: Mon. & Wed., 1:30pm-2:45pm, Joyce Cummings Center 170

Office hours:

Tuesdays, 1:00-3:00pm (in person, though we can have a Zoom meeting if that works better). Book office hours at <https://calendly.com/deborahschildkraut>. Once you sign up for a meeting, you will get a confirmation email with a link you can use to change or cancel the appointment. Email me to set up appointments for other times.

Meetings with our TA are by appointment.

Course description:

Political psychology is an interdisciplinary field that employs social and cognitive psychological theories to examine the world of politics. It is concerned with the role of human thought, emotion, and behavior in politics and in the linkages between these elements. We will explore several approaches to understanding the psychology of political behavior, with an emphasis on how context and institutional design can shape how people think and act politically. Topics covered include: information processing, rationality, emotions, personality, stereotyping, prejudice, intergroup conflict, and altruism.

The field of political psychology is vast, and there are several rich research traditions in the discipline that will not be covered in this course. Instead, the course focuses on a broad range of issues that deal with how ordinary citizens make sense of their political surroundings and how their understandings of the political world are linked to their political beliefs and behaviors. We will study the roles of political leaders, the media, race, ethnicity, gender, norms, and emotions in shaping how individual citizens experience politics. Most of the readings emphasize politics in the United States, though the field itself speaks to every aspect of political science.

We will also focus on methodological concerns in this course, spending time critiquing how scholars in political psychology test their arguments and designing our own approaches. The works we read use surveys, interviews, and/or experiments to collect data and investigate the dynamics of political attitudes and behaviors. Critiquing and designing such research techniques will help you to become critical consumers of social science information and provide an opportunity for your own creativity to be brought to bear on empirical investigations of the relationships between citizens and politics. This course fulfills the Political Science Department's methodology requirement.

Course format and requirements:

Class meets twice per week in either a lecture or workshop format. You are expected to come to class prepared to discuss issues raised in the readings. If you miss class: (1) let me or our TA know, (2) see slides posted on Canvas, and (3) seek notes from a classmate. Then see me if you want to go over the missed material. Do NOT come to class if you feel sick.

View the syllabus to see what is assigned and planned for each day.

View the relevant Canvas module to access the materials for that day.

I expect you to have read the assignments before class on the date they are listed and to have something to say about them. For weeks in which there is more than one reading listed, please read the items in the order in which they appear on the syllabus.

I strongly encourage you to follow current events and to read a national newspaper several times per week. I will be relying on current political issues and events for illustration, and I welcome your examples and observations in this regard.

Required Readings:

There are no books to buy for this course. All required readings are posted on CANVAS. Each week has its own module with the readings and related materials for each day.

SKIM: Occasionally, you are asked to skim a reading. "Skim" means you should be able to discuss the main idea of the reading, but you will not be held responsible for specific details.

PRIORITIZE: There may be times where it feels like there is too much reading. To make it more manageable, prioritize the readings that seem most interesting to you or that seem most difficult and you think you may need help making sense of it. For the other readings, be sure you know the main topics, findings, and arguments so you know that you can go to them when you want information on the topics they contain. At no point in the semester will I require you to memorize material from the reading nor will I quiz you on random details; you will have all readings at your disposal for all assignments. Knowing what's in them will help you use your time efficiently on exams and when working on projects.

A note on course content:

The content and discussion in this course addresses topics that can be emotionally and psychologically challenging, including racism, sexism, violence, and genocide. Although it is my hope that you are able to engage with all of our course material, it is acceptable for you to excuse yourself from lectures or discussions at any time if you feel you need to. If you feel you need to skip any particular reading, please let me know so we can work together to find ways to deliver course concepts differently.

Course website:

If you are already registered for PS111, you should have access to the course website on CANVAS. There, you will find the syllabus, weekly modules, readings, and other resources you may find useful as you work on assignments. I will use CANVAS to send emails to the class regarding announcements and possible syllabus changes or updates, and you will be required to use CANVAS to complete assignments. CANVAS automatically uses your “tufts.edu” email address; if this is not your preferred email address, then you must make sure that emails sent to you through CANVAS are forwarded to the appropriate location. It is your responsibility to make sure that you receive and read class emails.

If you have trouble with CANVAS, see me or request help at canvas@tufts.edu. Technology help for students is available at: <https://it.tufts.edu/technology-students>.

Note: if you click on a link for a reading and it doesn't open, try clicking where it says to open the file in a new window (near the top of the page).

Important Dates:

Tu, Oct. 4: Experiment design due

Mon, Oct. 9: NO CLASS: Indigenous People's Day

Tu, Oct. 10: Last day to drop a course

Mon, Oct. 23: Exam 1 due

Mon: Nov. 6: One paragraph description of final project topic due

Tues, Nov. 14: Last day to withdraw from a course

Wed, Nov. 22: NO CLASS: Thanksgiving Break

Mon, Dec. 4: Exam 2 due

Wed, Dec. 6: Prospectus due

Mon, Dec. 18: Final project due, 12pm

Assignments and Grading:

Asynchronous participation:	10%
Experiment design:	20%
Take home Exam 1:	20%
Take home Exam 2:	20%
Final project prospectus:	5%
Final project:	25%

All assignments except asynchronous participation are graded out of 100 points. I take off 5 points for every day that an assignment is late. The asynchronous participation grade is simply a tally of the completed assignments. I convert numbers to letters in the following manner:

97 – 100 = A+; 94 – 96 = A; 90 – 93 = A-; 87 – 89 = B+; 84 – 86 = B; 80 – 83 = B-; 77 – 79 = C+; 74 – 76 = C; 70 – 73 = C-; 65 – 70 = D; Below 65 = F

Asynchronous participation (10% of course grade):

Most weeks, you are asked to engage in some short asynchronous online activity to be completed by the start of class on the day indicated on the syllabus. Normally, this engagement is in the form of a content reaction. These reactions can be questions you would like addressed, critiques of readings, connections to current events, or ideas for further research. They can also be questions that came to you during class, critiques of scholarship discussed in lecture, or responses to comments from classmates. Sometimes the weekly engagement will ask you to post questions for an upcoming guest speaker. You will find the link to the week's assignment in the module for that week. A guide to writing effective content reactions is on CANVAS under the Module for Week 1. Your grade is the percentage of assignments that you have completed on time.

Experiment design (20% of course grade):

This assignment asks you to design an experiment that can be used to test a hypothesis related to theories in political psychology. The write-up for the experiment should be about 5-7 pages long and is worth 20% of your course grade. You will receive more instructions soon (including specific guidance regarding aspects of experimental design, such as control groups, random assignment, etc.). The assignment is due at the start of class on 10/4. Come to class on 10/2 prepared to talk about your design. Examples of successful experiment design assignments are available for you to see on CANVAS. Papers should be submitted in .docx format.

Research project (30% of course grade):

You have a choice of whether the final project will be a recorded presentation or a paper.

If you choose a paper, it should be about 18 pages (numbered, double-spaced, 1-inch margins). If you choose the recorded presentation, it should be 15-20 minutes long. The project is worth 25% of your course grade. The prospectus is worth 5% of your course grade. You will have a lot of freedom in choosing the topic for your project, though I provide suggestions, guidelines, and expectations to help you arrive at a workable idea. The main requirement is that your project be a research proposal related to any topic in our course syllabus.

First, you need to select a broad topic from our syllabus that interests you. Then you need to narrow your topic to a specific, testable research question. Designing your proposal will require you to:

- review relevant scholarly literature
- identify remaining controversies, problems, or unresolved issues
- design a study that would allow scholars to investigate a specific, testable question that derives from the remaining controversies, problems, or unresolved issues you've identified.

This assignment will require you to find, read, and incorporate scholarly academic readings not included on our syllabus. I do not expect you to collect your own data or to conduct your own experiments or surveys. You are allowed to use your experiment design as a starting point for this research proposal.

More information about this assignment will be provided in October. A one-paragraph description of your project topic is due on Nov. 6. A 5-page (minimum) prospectus is due at the start of class on Dec. 6. The prospectus should include:

- o Whether you plan to write a paper or submit a presentation
- o A detailed description of your paper topic and research strategy
- o An outline of the paper
- o A list of the sources you have consulted to date

On Dec. 6, you are also expected to share copies of your prospectus with the students in your peer review group. On our last class session, students will meet in assigned groups to critique each other's ideas. You will then be asked to post information on Canvas, seen only by me, about the information you received during your feedback session.

Each student is expected to meet with me or our TA at least once to discuss the research projects. The project itself is due at 12pm on Dec. 18. Papers and prospectuses should be submitted in .docx format.

An example successful research projects for this class are available for you to see on CANVAS.

Tufts policy on sharing course information:

It is against Tufts policy for anyone to share any content made available in this course including course syllabi, reading materials, powerpoint slides, videos, handouts, and exams with anyone outside of the course without the express permission of the instructor. This especially includes any posting or sharing of videos or other recordings on publicly accessible websites or forums. Any such sharing or posting could violate copyright law or law that protects the privacy of student educational records.

Extensions on assignments:

While it is best to avoid extensions and having material pile up, please know you can ask for extensions on assignments. If you ask, please ask as far in advance as possible and suggest an alternate due date. Indicate how much additional time you think you will need, and we'll go from there.

Office hours:

Office hours are a chance for you to talk with me about your coursework, the PS major, your thoughts on life after Tufts, or pretty much anything else. Office hours are by appointment at <https://calendly.com/deborahschildkraut>. Office hours are my preferred way to meet with you, but if the available times conflict with your schedule, send an email and we will find another time. Even if you don't have particular questions or concerns, it's a good idea to meet with your professors during office hours to help them get to know you.

Academic integrity:

Assignments you submit for this course will be reported to the Office of the Dean of Student Affairs if any evidence of academic dishonesty is detected. When in doubt, cite! Tufts Academic Integrity Resources can be found here: <https://students.tufts.edu/community-standards/support-resources/academic-integrity-resources>.

Academic Support and Accessibility Services at the StAAR Center:

The StAAR Center offers a variety of resources to all students, and services are free to all enrolled students. You can make an appointment to work on any writing-related project or assignment, attend subject tutoring, or meet with an academic coach to hone fundamental academic skills like time management or overcoming procrastination. You can make an appointment by visiting go.tufts.edu/TutorFinder, or by visiting <https://students.tufts.edu/staar-center>. You also take a self-assessment quiz to identify your work and study habits and connect with relevant resources. The StAAR Center is also where you should go to register for academic accommodations.

AI Technology:

- Submitting work generated by AI technology without attribution is considered a form of plagiarism.
- When submitting work, any portion of your work where you used AI technology at any stage for any reason requires citation, even if you are not adopting AI text verbatim.
- Assume that all facts and sources provided by AI technology are false; verify and cite the sources you used to verify.
- In an AI citation, provide (1) the prompt you used, (2) the name of the AI tool and, if available, the version, (3) the company that provides the tool, (3) the date you used it, and (4) the AI url. Note that the AI tool is NOT an author.
- Example from the Modern Language Association:
“Describe the symbolism of the green light in the book The Great Gatsby by F. Scott Fitzgerald” prompt. ChatGPT, 13 Feb. version, OpenAI, 8 Mar. 2023, chat.openai.com/chat.
