The goal of this short course is to offer an introduction into the world of global political economy and economic statecraft. A good policymaker needs to know about emerging and existing economic structures, as well as the utility of the instruments of economic statecraft. We will discuss theories explaining the global political economy, changes within the 21st century global political economy, the current set of global governance structures, the challenges they face in an age of populist nationalism, the tools of economic statecraft, and the political constraints on economic policymaking.
