

Estimated 2025-2026 Cost of Attendance (COA) & Standard Student Expense Budget

Estimated costs for one academic year. The COA establishes eligibility and a limit to the maximum aid a student may receive from all sources for the academic year.

Direct Costs = Charges billed by school.

Indirect Costs = Not billed (books, supplies, living expense allowances, etc.).

¹ Cost of health insurance will not be included in the COA for those waiving the insurance plan. The cost may be added to the COA (and loan eligibility) by request if student will directly incur the cost of a health insurance plan. The cost of the plan above is based on one person. All students will be billed for health insurance and must waive or enroll in the plan.

² Loan origination fees will only be included in the COA if you borrow a federal student loan. The estimate above is based on the average fees incurred by students in the same program. The fees you incur may be lower based on the amount you borrow. If your fees are higher and you are in need of a COA increase, you may contact the financial aid office.

³ PhD post-qualifying exam tuition rate is $2,500. Program applicants may contact the admissions office for stipend support information; which may differ for non-tuition and fee living expense amounts.

By request, an increase to the COA for the following cost components may be provided: dependent care expenses associated with time in school and studying ; disability expenses not covered by a third-party; cost of a computer for school-related activity. Documentation of expenses is required and cost limits may apply. Out-of-pocket medical costs and car repair expenses may be considered for a COA increase with documentation. Costs must be incurred by the student and during the enrollment period, although there is an exception for a school-related computer purchase. Contact the financial aid office if you require an increase to the COA. Funding for these additional expenses is subject to your eligibility for federal student loans.

MAPP research track students enrolled in the Fall 25-26 term will incur insurance plan and Health & Wellness Fee charges and are eligible for term-based living expenses and may apply for federal student aid. MAPP & MCM students enrolled under extension status will incur insurance plan and Health & Wellness Fee charges, as well as a continuation fee as determined by program guidelines and may be eligible for living expenses and federal student aid depending on enrollment level and academic progress status. Students repeating coursework or returning from a leave of absence must contact the financial aid office to review eligibility for federal student aid; students who are enrolled half-time or greater will incur health plan and Health & Wellness Fee charges and may incur tuition or continuation fee charges based on their enrollment requirements
