

The World Peace Foundation
In collaboration with Tufts University Water Diplomacy Program and the Center for International Environment and Resource Policy

Water Securities and Insecurities

Intensifying water stress is one of the key trends of the 21st century. As scarcity of fresh water intensifies, fears arise that conflict over water resources will emerge as a threat to world peace. However, leading experts highlight that management of transboundary waters leads to cooperation. The panel will address this question:

Will water stress lead to water war?

Panel speakers:

Ken Conca, American University

Andrea Gerlak, University of Arizona

Bruce Lankford, University of East Anglia

Lawrence Susskind, MIT

Moderated by

William Moomaw, Tufts University

Wednesday March 4, 2015

5:30pm-7:00pm

ASEAN Auditorium

The Fletcher School

at Tufts University

160 Packard Ave

Medford, Massachusetts